To Whom it may concern,

As with any major office relocation project, cabling, whether it is voice, data or integrated, is of vital importance to the eventual success of that project. The relocation of Reed Smith's London office to the Broadgate Tower, London EC2A was no exception. From the very beginning, when it was decided to use the services of Able Data Installations, to the time when the whole project was complete, the professionalism and courtesy shown by all members of the Able Data Installations team was continually evident.

They acted according to all HSSE rules that were laid down before them and were totally respectful of the surroundings in which they worked. This was particularly important as the office areas became occupied by Reed Smith's staff.

In conclusion, I was absolutely happy with all aspects of Able Data Installations involvement in this project, and would have no hesitation in using their services for future projects

Yours faithfully
